

“To learn
a foreign language
you must make
a thousand mistakes.”

For Esperanto it's only 250.

Learning a foreign language means memorizing a lot, and practicing a lot, and making mistakes a lot, until you've practiced every part of the grammar.

But you can learn Esperanto four times faster than other languages. Because the grammar is completely regular — and very simple. No lists of exceptions, no irregular verbs. Learn a rule and start using it; you know you're using it correctly. And it's completely phonetic. The result? You can become fluent — actually able to speak and read Esperanto — four times faster than you could learn other languages.

Maybe that's why two million people all over the world speak Esperanto.
