All kinds of people speak Esperanto. East and West, North and South, rich and poor, regardless of accent, people meet each other as equals with it. It's the international language that works.

Esperanto is four times easier to learn than other languages — a perfect second language. Its grammar is very regular — and very small. So you can start to speak and read it almost immediately.

Esperanto is politically neutral — used in over a hundred countries. It doesn't come from any single country or any single culture, so people all over the world have learned it.

Two million people speak it. Isn't it time you did, too?

The international language that works.
