Many people don't know that Esperanto is at least four times easier to learn than other languages.

Because the grammar is completely regular—and very simple. No lists of exceptions, no irregular verbs. And it's completely phonetic. The result? You can become fluent—actually able to speak and read Esperanto—in a quarter of the time you'd need for some other language.

Maybe that's why two million people all over the world speak Esperanto. Too bad we couldn't fit that number into the heading.

Esperanto—the international language that works
