

THE TRANSPORTATION REVOLUTION

THE COMMUNICATIONS REVOLUTION

Everyone knows how important the wheel is. Wheels make it possible to get from one place to another. But when you get there... can you speak their language?

The green star is a symbol of Esperanto. Esperanto helps people communicate, wherever they are. It's a language designed especially for international communication, and it works. About two million people speak it already. It's related to English, French, German, Spanish, etc., so you already know a lot of the vocabulary. It's completely regular, so you don't have to memorize lists of exceptions. It's politically neutral, so it's acceptable everywhere. It even sounds good—so there's a lot of original literature and poetry in Esperanto.

Once the transportation revolution gets you there, you just might want to say something—without learning half a dozen languages. For more information, including a free postal course, contact:
